FARMERS FIND WAY TO BREAK UP CRUST

After planting corn in furrows six to eight inches deep, says William A. Stuart of Portal, it rained more or less for three days. This caked the ground considerably, and the corn, which was then two inches high. The problem was to break the crust without injuring the corn. This was finally accomplished successfully by running a disk harrow with the disks set straight over the land at right angles to the ridges. Very little dirt was pulled into the furrows.

CRIMINAL COURT DOCKET ENDED

July Was a Month Notable, and Well Filled In With Business for the Office of the County Attorney

When Pete Woolf, charged with child stealing, came to trial in the superior court yesterday and was sentenced to serve three months in the county jail, the last item was added to the record of one of the most interesting terms of criminal court in the history of Maricopa county.

During the July term County Attorney Clyde M. Gandy and his assistant, G. S. Cunningham, did not lose a single case and there were more than twenty that claimed their attention. Not all of these were bootlegging cases although the majority of the cases in which the state was the plaintiff were against violators of the prohibition amendment. Assault with a deadly weapon, rape, contributory dependency were a few of the charges placed against the different defendants. County Attorney Gandy did not miss a day in the court room and had his cases so well worked out that it was not unusual for him to try two or possibly three cases in a day. Even the Gaugler case, one of the most bitterly contested liquor cases, was completed in less than a day.

Although the court heard behind closed doors the case of Paul Stevens and Cyril Kedding, charged with contributing to the dependency of a minor girl, was of the greatest interest to the public, which eagerly awaited the outcome. After being found guilty the defendants were admitted to bail until the court passed sentence and Stevens, it will be recalled, forfeited his bail. As yet the sheriff's office has been unable to get any trace of him. Baker & Baker, counsel for Kedding, have appealed.

The term opened with an assault with a deadly weapon case in which the defendants were P. O. Rhoads, Dan Steele and Horace Steels, and George Pundy Ballard secured acquittal for the Steele case. Fred Steele, convicted for Rhoads. After this followed case in quick succession, trying in itself, although the county attorney prosecuted his last case with the same vigor and freshness that marked his opening of the term.

Following is an outline of the cases tried and others in which the defendants pleaded guilty.

GRADY charged with assault with a deadly weapon; Fred Rhoads, assault with deadly weapon; R. H. Pundy, introducing intoxicating liquor; M. C. Thompson, introducing intoxicating liquor; Fred Steele, contributory dependency; Cyril Kedding, contributory dependency; Henry Williamson, selling liquor; Alejandro Arriaga, selling liquor; Carl Carlson, selling liquor; William Curtis, selling liquor; Emil Gaugler, selling liquor; D. G. Wright, selling liquor; John Zannetti, selling liquor; J. J. O'Keefe, rape; M. J. DeLoach, rape; L. L. Loebe, selling liquor; Fred Daniels, selling liquor; E. R. Stewart, rape; J. J. Moran, assault with deadly weapon; Ramon Lammon, forgery; John Stanford, selling liquor; June, 1917, for conspiracy, Mrs. Brown states that the defendant is now in Fall River, Massachusetts, but that he has not supported her with the common necessities of life.

TO CHLORIDE—R. C. Bone and J. T. Murphy left last evening for Chloride, where they have extensive mining interests. These men are large stockholders in the Hidden Treasure Mine, and it is understood that they have been called to attend a special meeting of the directors to consider further development work on the property. Engineer Thompson, who represents the Bonbright Company, has submitted a very favorable report of the mine bearing out the former report of Engineer Smith.
